Richard Daschbach, priest defrocked by Catholic church over abuse, ordained by Divine Word order near Northb...

Associated Press. 9 April 2021 photos only

This woman has accused now-defrocked Catholic priest Richard Daschbach of abuse when she was a child living at the Topu Honis children’s shelter in Kutet, East Timor. Over a dozen accusers have come forward to accuse Daschbach. AP
This 2013 photo provided to The Associated Press shows now-defrocked Catholic priest Richard Daschbach leading a service at a church in Kutet, East Timor. AP
The Society of the Divine Word order’s grounds near Northbrook, where now-defrocked priest Richard Daschbach trained and was ordained.  Robert Herguth / Sun-Times

This 2007 photo provided to The Associated Press shows now-defrocked Catholic priest Richard Daschbach’s private chapel at the Topu Honis children’s shelter in Kutet, East Timor.  AP
This 2010 photo provided to The Associated Press shows children sifting rice at the Topu Honis children’s shelter in Kutet, East Timor. AP

Xanana Gusmao (right), former East Timorese president and prime minister, gives a fist bump to Richard Daschbach (center), a defrocked priest on trial on child abuse charges, after a hearing at a courthouse in Oecusse, East Timor on Feb. 23. Daschbach’s support appears deep and widespread, extending beyond Oecusse to the capital city of Dili. It includes members of the political elite, including Gusmao. Raimundos Oki / AP
In this 2017 photo provided to The Associated Press, a young girl clips the toenails of now-defrocked Catholic priest Richard Daschbach at the Topu Honis children’s shelter in Kutet, East Timor. AP

In Dili, East Timor, defrocked Catholic priest Richard Daschbach (center) is presented a cake on Jan. 26 for his 84th birthday. Raimundos Oki / AP
Click here to read Sun-Times Feb. 7 report.